Bio

I am an experienced & professionally qualified relationship counsellor & sex therapist.

I have a Postgraduate Diploma in Relationship Therapy & a Professional Certificate in Psychosexual Therapy from Relate, & a Masters Degree in Social Work from the University of Sussex.

I am a registered member of COSRT, the professional body for relationship & sex therapists, and have been in private practice for 13 years, working with clients across the UK & internationally.

I have also been a professional jazz pianist, and an academic philosopher.

Until recently I worked as a psychosexual therapist for All Points North, the premier US health & well-being clinic in London's West End, including running workshops.

I am now part of Connect MDT, the multi-disciplinary wellbeing team who worked together there.

I also worked for Relate, the UK's relationship counselling organisation, and am listed in the Relate Practitioners Directory as a sex therapy practitioner.

Previously I worked as a university lecturer, teaching philosophy for 25 years at Richmond The American University in London.

I was also a professional jazz musician, headlining the Jazz Cafe, & the house pianist at The Ivy, & Pont de la Tour among others.

I currently write for Liz Earle Wellbeing, have been interviewed recently by Mareilla Frostrup on Times Radio, have written for Newsweek, and have appeared as a guest on many podcasts, among other media appearances. See my home page for details.

Besides relationship & psychosexual therapy, I am also trained in psychodynamic, systemic, existential, Transactional Analysis, & CBT approaches to therapy.

I am fully insured and have a current advanced DBS certificate.
